PREFACE

The Historical Records Survey was organized as a Nation-wide project of the Work Projects Administration in January 1936 and was initiated in Michigan in 1936. It has always operated under the administrative supervision of the Division of Community Service Programs of the Work Projects Administration. By act of Congress, Federal Project No. 1. of which the Historical Records Survey was a unit, was abolished as a Federally sponsored project on August 31, 1939. At this time the units of the project went under local sponsorship by the State Administrative Board of the State of Michigan.

At its inception the Michigan division of the Historical Records Survey was under the direction of an Assistant State Supervisor, Dr. Milo M. Quaife, Secretary and Editor of the Burton Historical Collections of the Detroit Public Library, and an Associate Supervisor, Mr. William Jabine. Dr. Quaife retired from the project on December 1, 1936, and Mr. Jabine was named State Director. Mr. Jabine served until April 1, 1939, when Mr. Stuart Portner was named State Director.

The publication of this volume is the first in a series of check lists of Vital Statistics Holdings by Government agencies in Michigan prepared by workers of the Michigan Historical Records Survey of the Work Projects Administration. Volumes in preparation on marriage, death, and divorce records will be published within the very near future.

The check list of Vital Statistics Holdings by Government Agencies in Michigan is one of a Nation-wide series of inventories prepared by the Historical Records Survey Projects. This work was begun in September 1940 under authorization of Professional & Service Letter No. 75 in an effort to provide the Vital Statistics Division of the Bureau of the Census and the National Defense Program with certain information concerning birth and other vital statistics records.

With the passage of the Selective Service Act, the Alien Registration Act, and the acceleration of defense industries necessitating certification of birth, naturalization, and residence in the United States, an immediate reference list of available vital statistics records was found a prime essential for the confirmation of such certification. The study of birth records holdings in Michigan is presented as a reference guide for government, public, and private agencies requiring a check on vital statistics information relative to this State.

Preface

The check list of birth records holdings in Michigan is divided into two sections: an introductory essay covering the legal background of the recording of birth records, and an analytical inventory of birth records held by State, county, and municipal agencies.

The legal essay of this inventory gives a comprehensive treatment of legislation concerning the creation of a system of recording and keeping birth records in Michigan. The analytical entries contain information concerning birth records under specific column headings. Under column #1 of the analytical entry will be found the name of the State, county, town, and other local records keeping units. State records are listed first, then those of the county according to alphabetical arrangement. In instances where towns and municipalities within the counties have separate files for the records within their jurisdiction, they are listed alphabetically under the county. Under successive columns are listed descriptive titles of the records, dates covered by the record, and a statement of the quantity and type of container. Under the fifth column heading is the statement whether the record is original or a duplicate of an official record. The following columns give information on the arrangement and indexing of the volumes, and the title and address of the custodian of the records to whom application was made for copy of record.

The preparation of this publication was begun under the direction of Floyd R. Irish, unit supervisor, and was completed by Mrs. Josephine Schielke, unit supervisor, after Mr. Irish's departure for the United States Army. The legal sketch was prepared under the direction of Charles B. O'Hagan, project editor, and Edward G. Carter, unit supervisor.

The State staff has profited in all phases of its work by the constructive advice and criticism of the National office of the Survey. This inventory in final manuscript form was edited in the Washington, D.C., office by Mabel S. Brodie, assistant archivist in charge of public records inventories.

Volumes in the series of Vital Statistics Holdings by Government Agencies in Michigan will be available for distribution to governmental offices, libraries, schools, and historical societies in Michigan and throughout the country. Requests for information concerning the work in Michigan should be addressed to the State Supervisor.

REGISTRATION OF BIRTHS

The first attempt of the Michigan State Legislature to inaugurate a State-wide compulsory system for the recording of important information relating to births and other vital statistics was made in 1867, for the incidental purpose of ascertaining thereby the density of the population. Although the recording of births has been required by statute since that time, records may be found in various counties organized before that date.[1] Immigration from Europe was considerable and a great number of the new arrivals came from countries abroad which had long since adopted elaborate systems of vital statistics and had, to a high degree, developed the science of acquiring information concerning all the inhabitants. The merits of such a system was self-evident. It served to keep a check on the activities of criminals, making it easier to bring them to justice, it aided in the enforcement of compulsory military service, and carried in its train numerous other advantages tending to simplify the administration of civic affairs.

The passage of the law of 1867 was a very feeble effort to emulate the completed systems of countries hundreds of years older than our State. Its administration met with formidable obstacles from the very beginning, the principal one being the indifference of certain sections of our populace. The practice of obstetrics was to a large extent in the hands of midwives, generally recruited from the intermediate strata of society, and largely lacking in a proper sense of civic responsibility. Next in order of indifference were the rural members of the medical fraternity. When it is remembered that Michigan was at that time principally agriculture, sparsely settled, county seats relatively inacessible, roads often impassable, and means of communication quite primitive, it is not surprising that after a birth had occurred it was highly problematical whether it would be recorded. This law proved in practice to be entirely inadequate as it imposed the principal duty of gathering information regarding births upon the supervisors of the several townships of each county, fixing upon them a fine for neglect or refusal of duty, but not fixing a penalty upon the person officiating at a birth and failing to report it.[2]

Registration of Births

The law was amended in 1869,[1] but this amendment referred only to the registration of deaths, as did a statute passed in 1897,[2] and again amended in 1901.[3]

The first effective law was enacted in 1905,[4] which very fully designated certain officials and other persons as local registrars, and the Secretary of State as State registrar of births. This act specifically prescribed the facts required to be recorded and provided a penalty to be imposed upon any physician or other person in attendance upon a case of confinement who neglected or refused to file a certificate containing all the required data within 5 days after the birth of any child.[5] This act also provided for the payment of 50 cents for each certificate to the person in attendance at the birth, and the payment of 25 cents to each local registrar for each certificate properly completed and filed with him and returned to the Secretary of State. The act provided for such payments by the county treasurer, but excepted from the benefits thereof the registrars of the cities of Detroit and Grand Rapids. All certificates of birth were to be executed in duplicate, one copy to be retained in the office of the local registrar, the other returned to the Secretary of State,[6] who was directed to furnish certified copies to any applicant, for which he could collect a fee of 50 cents for each copy.[7] This act became effective January 1, 1906, and while it only repealed those parts of the act of 1867, as amended in 1869, that were inconsistent with its provisions, it in effect superseded all existing laws on birth registration.[8]

The act just cited as well as the act of 1897 was repealed by the passage of an act of the legislature in 1925.[9] This act created the State Bureau of Vital Statistics and conferred supervisory control over this bureau upon the State Department of Health

thus depriving the Secretary of State of jurisdiction in matters relating to registration of births.[1] The State Health Commissioner has the power to appoint a director in charge of the bureau, and to detail such clerical and other assistants as may be necessary to carry on its work.[2] Each city, incorporated village, township, State hospital, and charitable and penal institution is declared to constitute a primary registration district, but several districts may be combined into one at the option of the State Commissioner of Health.[3]

The clerks of the several governmental subdivisions, and the superintendent or other person in charge of each State hospital or charitable or penal institution is the local registrar of such district of vital statistics, who shall appoint a deputy to act in behalf of the registrar in his absence or disability. In any city having a full time health officer, the State Commissioner of Health may appoint such health officer as local registrar. All births must be recorded in books provided for that purpose, and must be numbered consecutively in the order of their reception and in a separate series for each calendar year.[4] The State Commissioner of Health furnishes all forms used in the recording of births and no other may be used.[5] This law also requires all births to be reported by filing a certificate of birth within 5 days by the midwife, physician, or other person in attendance, or in the absence of such, by the father or mother of the child, the householder, or owner of the premises where the birth occurred, or by the manager or superintendent of the institution.[6] Births of still-born children must be reported where uterogestation has progressed to the fifth month.[7]

Local registrars must send all original certificates to the State Department of Health on the fourth day of the month following the filing thereof. The act is silent as to the retention of copies.[1] They must also send a transcript of all births registered by them to their county clerk at the end of each quarter, and are entitled to receive a fee of 25 cents for each registration from their county treasurer after a warrant for the amount claimed for the year ending March 31 has been checked for accuracy by the county clerk.[2]

The act provides for punishment by a fine of not less than $5 and not more than $50 for a physician's failure to report a birth within 5 days, for the first offense. Each subsequent offense is punishable by a fine of not less than $50 and not more than $200. Any local registrar who fails to report a birth or fails to enforce the provisions of this act is subject to a fine and removal from office by the Governor, and is ineligible for re-appointment or reelection for 2 years thereafter.[3]

Section 17 of this act was amended in 1933 to the effect that if the parents of an illegimate child become legally married subsequent to the birth of the child, the State Health Commissioner shall upon satisfactory documentary proof substitute the married name of the mother so as to record the legitimate birth of the child. The father or mother of any child or the mother alone of an illegitimate child, whose birth has been registered, may during the lifetime of said child change the given name of the child on the record by filing a supplementary certificate of its name.[4] Any applicant may upon request obtain a certified copy of any birth record from the State Health Commissioner upon payment of a fee of 50 cents. Soldiers or any members of their families may secure copies of records for the purpose of obtaining pensions or compensation without paying the fee. Courts of this State, any State official, or department are also exempt from payment of the fee.[5]

An act designed to cure some of the errors occasioned by the failure of many of the early obstetricians to record births attended by them was passed in 1931.[6] By virtue of this act any unrecorded birth which occurred in Michigan subsequent to 1867 and where the attending physician is not available may be registered by application of the interested person to the judge of probate either in the county of residence or the county of birth.[1] The application must set out all the facts required in the certificate of birth as issued by the State Health Commissioner under the law of 1925, and must be accompanied by the affidavit of at least two persons having knowledge of the facts stated in the application, or by documentary evidence, and a fee of $2.[2] The judge may require such testimony as in his judgment is sufficient, and when satisfied, issues an order to the State Health Comissioner to register the birth.[3] The judge must remit to the State Health Commissioner, with the order for registration, the sum of $1, and retain the other dollar for his services.[4] Recently the Michigan Supreme Court amended its rules relating to the circuit court giving this court a jurisdiction over unrecorded births occurring outside the State similar to the power of the probate court in regard to the delayed registration of births occurring within the State.[5]

Section 16 of the act of 1925 was amended in 1931,[6] to the effect that the minimum charge for a certified copy of a birth record issued by the State Health Commissioner shall be $1, which is 50 cents for the copy and 50 cents for the search, provided that the search does not extend to a longer period than 3 years, if it extends to a longer period, the charge is 25 cents for each additional year. Additional copies of the same record ordered with the first, costs 50 cents for each certified copy. Any soldier, sailor, marine, or member of his family may obtain one certified copy without charge if it is to be used for the purpose of securing pensions or compensation. Upon formal application, copies shall be furnished without charge, for official use only, to any court or State department. Copies of records of illegitimate births are only furnished upon a court order, except to the mother of the child.[7]

Section 12 of the act of 1925 was amended in 1933,[8] to the effect that if no physician, midwife, or other person is in attendance at a birth, it becomes the duty of the father or mother of the child, the householder or owner of the premises or the manager or superintendent of the public or private institution where the birth occurred, in the order named, to report such birth to the local registrar within 5 days thereafter. Illegitimate births must be filed with the State Department of Health instead of the local registrar. Whenever a decree of adoption is entered in any court of competent jurisdiction in the State, a record of such adoption must be filed with the State Department of Health, on a form prescribed by the Health Commissioner. The record must show the new name of the child, the names of the foster parents, and the date and place of birth as nearly as may be known, but must make no reference to the natural parents.[1]

Section 17 of the act of 1925 was amended in 1933[2] to provide for the correction of a birth certificate heretofore registered. If facts contained therein are not correctly stated, the Health Commissioner shall require satisfactory evidence to be presented in the form of affidavits or otherwise. Thus the original record may be changed to conform to the true facts.[3]

Act 343 of 1925, with amendments to date, is the basic law on the recording of births and information relevant thereto. The amendments have not changed the substance of the law in important aspects. The regularity of the reporting of births by physicians and others, and the systematic recording by the public officials has generally improved since the enactment of this law. In recent times an unrecorded birth is the exception in the State of Michigan.
